Sustainable Energy & Environmental Network Citizen Supporters: Helping transform the present and build the future of sustainable energy and environmental stewardship in the Mid-Columbia!

The Sustainable Energy & Environmental Network (SEEnet) is a non-profit organization dedicated to educating and assisting the environmental stewardship and sustainable use of energy resources and technologies. Your donation is used to fund SEEnet activities, events, and resources that help educate students, businesses and the general public on these important issues. These activities, events and resources include:

- Solar car competition that teaches 5th grade students the basic technology behind solar electric power.
- Electrathon America race that gives high school students and the public access to new technology by building and racing their own electric vehicles.
- Mid-Columbia Earth Month event to improve our environment through an entire month of educational activities and community-building clean-up projects.
- Portable exhibits that demonstrate basic alternative energy concepts with easy-to-understand language and hands-on displays.
- SEEnetwork.us, a website dedicated to providing resources to businesses and the community on energy and environmental issues.
- Networking and mentoring opportunities, guest speakers, tours and more.
